ALGENON CASH

Entrepreneur, Speaker, Writer, Philanthropist, Political Advisor, Radio Personality, Fiscal Conservative, Real Estate Investor and Financier

Algenon (Al-ja-non) Cash is managing director of Wharton Gladden, a boutique real estate investment banking firm headquartered in North Carolina.

In 2003, Algenon and a group of private investors created Wharton Gladden to provide financial advisory services, capital placement, asset management and private equity to corporations, real estate developers, investors, municipalities, financial institutions and high-net worth individuals.

Algenon has strategically advised clients in close to 100 multifamily and commercial real estate transactions while successfully placing capital for 35 transactions that have totaled over $150 Million.

Business Leader Media has named Wharton Gladden one of North Carolina's "Top 100 Small Businesses" and one of the "Top 300 Small Businesses in the Southeast".

Algenon launched the Power of One Fund in 2009 to honor the lifelong contributions of Irene Wharton and Franklin Gladden. The Fund supports local charities that provide services to victims of homelessness, substance abuse and domestic violence. Algenon serves as chairman of the Fund Advisory Council and Operating Committee. The Fund hosts a variety of charitable fundraisers annually, including a community movie night that attracted 2,000 local families, and collected 1,700 pounds of food.

A very brief list of his accomplishments includes: In 2010, the North Carolina Council on Economic Education appointed Algenon to their board of directors, and subsequently to the executive committee. Algenon serves as the Governmental Affairs Chair and he co-chairs the Marketing / Public Relations Committee. Algenon also joined the Wake Forest University Executive Partners Mentorship Program and he works closely with students that are enrolled in the university's MBA program.

In 2012, Algenon was named Chairman and Small Business Ambassador for the North Carolina Energy Forum, the state's leading citizen group for domestic energy education and advocacy.

In 2013, Winston-Salem State University recruited Algenon to teach a new commercial real estate development course.

Also in 2013, the University of North Carolina Board of Governors appointed Algenon to the Center for Design Innovation board of trustees, CDI is a multi-campus research center within the statewide UNC system. In the same year, Forsyth Futures named Algenon as a board member, and then subsequently appointed him to the Governmental Affairs Committee.

In 2014, Algenon was named National Director of Minority Engagement for the America's Energy Forum, which is a non-partisan community of 23 states promoting sound energy policies for the entire country. Algenon provides education and verifiable facts to minority elected officials, business owners and community leaders around the country.

Algenon has been profiled in a variety of publications such as the Triad Business Journal, Business Leader Magazine and Development Magazine. He writes a regular blog at AlgenonCash.com. He is a guru on personal finance and appeared regularly on 97.1 QMG with radio personality Busta Brown, and he was the co-host of Community Focus with Renee Vaughn. Algenon is a regular guest on the Bill LuMaye Show where he discusses economic issues, community activism and American politics.
